(WASHINGTON) - U.S. Rep. Mike Coffman, R-CO, released the following statement today after the Labor Department released its jobs report for November:

"Positive job growth is always good news and I am glad the unemployment rate went down last month, however it still is too high and there is much more we can do to help get Americans back to work. In the House we have passed 25 bipartisan jobs bills that will stimulate economic growth by removing unnecessary government hurdles for our job creators in the private sector. I hope President Obama sees this as an opportunity to call on the Senate to vote on these much-needed jobs bills awaiting their approval."
