

The best way to preserve American agriculture and to support the preservation of family farms and ranches is to end the death tax once and for all. The tax makes it impossible for one generation to pass a family farm or ranch to the next. The United States must do all it can to promote positive trade policies that increase America's agricultural export markets.