

(WASHINGTON, D.C.) – U.S. Rep. Mike Coffman (R-Colorado) issued the following statement on President Barack Obama's Fiscal Year 2010 Budget.

“The President's new budget is just another extension of a desire to deficit spend our way deeper and deeper into debt. Any notion of ever returning to fiscal discipline is lost in this budget. The idea that we are going to reduce the deficit within four years to half of its current level may sound responsible on the surface but it isn't since the deficit has, in the last two weeks, reached record levels. Is our goal to permanently become the largest debtor nation praying on our knees that other countries will take pity on us and buy our debt so we can keep recklessly spending far beyond our means?”
